COVERT CONTROL

HOW TO USE UNDERHANDED PSYCHOLOGY TRICKS TO CONTROL WOMEN

by HAMILTON MILLER
How to Use Underhanded Psychology Tricks To Control Women

By Hamilton Miller
Author of “Elite Social Control”
(http://derekrake.com/elitesocialcontrol)

Warning: The material contained in this report is for informational purposes only. You are ultimately responsible for your own actions that you take. If you do not agree, please delete this report immediately.

When you're in the process of getting to know someone new, but you think you might like to try to seduce, the process of getting them to fall for you may be more complicated than just what you say. There can be much more to a conversation with a member of the opposite sex than just what is actually spoken.

The human mind is much more complicated than that, and it picks up on tiny signals that you're sending that she may not even consciously recognize. Yes, it is possible to impress a girl without are actively knowing. All she'll realize is that she's more attracted to you than she was before, regardless of the content of your conversation.

Many of these tactics will relate back to the type of body language that you use, except that now the context of the usage has changed, since you're not targeting all of the outward projections of yourself toward one person: the girl you're speaking to right this minute. This will simultaneously simplify your job while increasing the critical importance of what you do if you want to successfully score with this woman.

How To Listen To A Woman... And Seduce Her Covertly

When you're engaged in a conversation with a woman, it's important not to try to dominate it by doing all the talking yourself.

Of course, you want her to know all about you, but you can't use the direct approach. It will make you seem too conceited, and will cause her to make decisions about you right then and there that are against your favor in terms of your odds of success.
The way a woman talks to you will give you a lot of insight into the way she thinks, so it's much more important to listen to what she has to say. It's true, women can have a tendency to drone on about some pretty inane stuff, but you need to be able to look like you're soaking up every single word of it.

This will accomplish two things. First, you'll seem like a good listener, which nearly all women see is a fantastic trait in a potential mate. Even if you're not interested in what she is going on about, it's important that you act the part.

Second, at some point in time she'll realize that she's been doing a lot more talking than you have, which is going to make her curious about you.

If you're patiently listening to her drone on about stuff that dies in her past and never cared to listen to, it will have the effect of making you seem both mysterious and interesting. After that, she's more likely to be open to anything you could possibly have to say, since curiosity is going to begin getting the better of her.

We are not suggesting that you withhold input from the conversation whenever she's talking, because women also don't like one-sided conversations. If she starting to feel like she's in the middle of a monologue, then you're not doing a good enough job acting interested.

Sometimes it can be useful to interject little comments that relate to a story she's telling, but without going off on a tangent with your own life story. Always maintain eye contact with her whenever she's talking, and don't let your eyes wander distantly.

She'll pick up on that very quickly, and she may even come out and ask you what you're looking at that is so important, and invariably, you will not have a good answer, so avoid that trap as much as you can.

Stay Focused: Avoid Wandering Onto Inappropriate Topics

It's important to keep contact light in friendly if you're getting to know someone new, especially for someone you met socially like a girl from a party, or a bar.

If this is your first social outing with her, it's way too early for questions about past relationships, career, or education. Seeming to theories about these things will make it look like you're already thinking of your future with this person, which makes you appear needy.
Still, be careful not to react to strongly if these questions are asked to you. Be courteous, but don't reveal too much information. Make her stay curious about you, and the things you have going on in your life.

If this is a new girl you're talking to, resist the urge to tell her she's wrong about something she thinks. People's opinions are their own, but sometimes they are just plain misinformed when it comes to the facts, and it can be tempting to try to set them straight, and make yourself look smart in the process.

If you have any intention of sleeping with this woman that you're talking to in the future, you'll avoid this temptation, because it will only make you seem like a know-it-all, especially if you do it more than once.

This is an especially large pitfall if you're out at a party, because if a comment that you made to anybody in the room makes it look like you're trying to start an argument, you're going to look pretty unsociable, and it can kill your chances of getting to know anybody else in the room.

Have an opinion, yes, but try to go out of your way to seem agreeable and unaffected by abrasive people who believe strange things.

Congruency - Talk Like You Mean It

Whether you're in a one-on-one situation, or you're talking to someone at a big social get-together, looking like you're the kind of guy who has a good attitude is all about maintaining that all-important feeling of confidence.

You have to maintain a delicate balance of always being able to look unshaken by anything that is said or done, but without seeming cold and uncaring. Always smile when it's appropriate to smile, but never overreact, even if something really funny just happened. It's always sort of awkward to be the last one in a group who's still laughing about something that happened a few minutes ago.

You don't want something that's that silly to kill your chances with a girl you're trying to get to know. By always appearing to remain stable, you'll avoid looking like you're trying to go out of your way to impress people, which helps you to avoid looking less needy. Socially speaking, you have to remember that you are the man in the situation. Conversationally, people should be coming to you, and not the other way around.

Speaking of conversation, one of the most critical mistakes that guys make lies in the way that they actually talk. A girl can tell a lot about a guy based on how he projects his voice, and it can make or break your chances of getting with her.

Never allow your voice to trail off in the middle of a sentence, and if you're not sure of yourself when you're trying to say something, hold off on saying anything at all. Again, eye contact is important when you're speaking to someone, especially if it's a woman. Square up your shoulders and faced them when you're speaking, so as to seem more respectful.

That way, it seems like you're talking to the person rather than just talking within earshot of them. Always speak clearly, but keep what you have to say brief. Allow them to finish your thoughts for you, whenever it seems to fit.

Again, even if the conversation is about a topic that you're really into, avoid getting overly excited. Staying laid-back, but attentive is the best way to keep someone you talking to interested in what you think. Allow other people to react to the things you say, while you remain steady as a rock. In this way, you are the one who stays in control of the conversation.

Self Control - Taking Charge of Your Impulses

By staying in control of yourself, and keeping a tight leash on your own emotions, you can keep control of any social situation. Consistency is the key here.

Stay focused on remaining assertive, so that other people don't dominate the conversation, but also try to be a good listener. Finding a good balance between the two is one of the keys to being a good conversationalist, and you'll be amazed at how quickly your able to attract female attention with your new habits.

With this new level of control, you can spin a conversation in a direction that you wish, but we advise you to always try to keep things light and positive. Even if you've had a bad day, never let negativity in the tone of your voice.

Allowing things to happen in your life to get you down as a sign of a lack of control, and women will subconsciously pick up on these things.

Your positive attitude should seem indestructible. If you let a woman know that you're the one that's in control of your own life, it's only a matter of time before she'll want to be a part of it.
But if you equip yourself with some mind blowing Covert Control techniques, you will make the seduction process easier than ever. And you know what?

It's time for YOU to become an "alpha male".

It's time for YOU to become the person that "lights up the room" when they walk in.

It's time for YOU to develop mind-numbing charisma.

It's time for YOU to experience unlimited personal power.

This report is a short version of “Elite Social Control” - simple, proven, step-by-step method that will teach you the secrets of true influence and persuasion, enabling you to get anything you desire.

Elite Social Control is a new system - not a rehash of old hypnotic language patterns that someone threw together to make a quick buck. It's not a rehash of old self-help techniques, either.

Not everyone is ready for this kind of knowledge. To find out if you are, click on this link below.

http://www.derekrake.com/EliteSocialControl

Yours in covert seduction,

Hamilton Miller

P/s: If you want to get in touch, email Derek Rake at askderek@deadlyseduction.net and he’ll forward your message to me.